

Simulation Australia

Australian Society for Simulation in Healthcare (ASSH)

ASSH's mission is to promote simulation education, training and research to enhance the safety and quality in healthcare.

ASSH represents a cross-section of the Australian healthcare community who share simulation as a common interest, including healthcare professionals, academics, industry groups and policy makers. ASSH operates under the auspices of Simulation Australia Ltd and is officially affiliated with the Society for Simulation in Healthcare (SSH).

Objectives

1. To develop standards of practice regarding the key applications of simulation including education, research and patient care.
2. To foster a network of professionals working within the simulation field.
3. To advocate for continued development and availability of simulation-based modalities for key applications including education, research and patient care.
4. To form affiliations with societies and groups having common goals in relation to simulation and safety and quality in healthcare.
5. To promote the professional development of individuals working in the simulation field.
6. To advise on legislation related to the use of simulation in healthcare.
7. To be recognised as the official representative of these groups within Australia.

Scope of Activities

- Conducting conferences, seminars and workshops.
- Sponsoring student scholarships.
- Contributing to the development of Australian and international standards of simulation.
- Liaising with international simulation organisations.
- Advising federal and state government regarding the use of simulation in Australian healthcare.
- Encouraging research.
- Information dissemination via newsletters and the website.

SimTecT Healthcare Conference

The SimTecT Healthcare Conference is held over 3 days each September. It is a national forum for simulation in Australia, bringing together international and local experts in simulation education, research and development, human factors, health systems and therapies. The program, which has four concurrent streams, included numerous small group workshops.
