The contribution that gaming can make to the provision of safe high quality healthcare is not widely understood. The technologies and techniques which games employ to deliver serious messages can be leveraged to achieve low cost, high impact solutions across the healthcare and other sectors.

This symposium will introduce participants to the opportunities and issues that serious games offer – for training, therapy and testing. It brings together experts from the US, experienced practitioners, game developers, educators and healthcare professionals. Workshops and hands-on demonstrations will complement plenary sessions from invited keynote speakers.
